

Introductions , comparative & superlative dialogue

Erik: Hey, how are you? Welcome to Kuraburi.

Helen: I'm very sleepy but it's good to be here.

Jamie: How was your journey?

Helen: Long! It was longer than the journey between Ranong and Phuket.

Jamie: Where are you from?

Helen: Scotland. It's a lot hotter in Thailand than in Scotland.

Jamie: Scotland is one of the coldest countries in Europe isn't it?

Helen: No it's not, but it is one of the wettest.

Erik: Is your family in Scotland?

Helen: Yes. I have two older sisters and one older brother, they all live in Scotland. My mother and father live in Scotland too.

Jamie: Do they all have red hair too?

Helen: No! They've all got dark hair, apart from my brother; he has the lightest hair in my family.

Erik: Well, are you feeling hungry?

Helen: A little bit.

Jamie: Would you like some food?

Erik: There are a few restaurants in Kuraburi, they all have good food.

Helen: Yes, that'd be great.

Jamie: those bags look heavy – can I carry one for you?

Helen: Sure, thanks.
